Plan B to hit store shelves

Activist 'delighted' with changes to sale of 'morning after' pill

Plan B, the controversial "morning after" contraceptive pill, will be freely available on Canadian drugstore shelves instead of being kept behind the pharmacy counter.

The drug, which can be taken up to three days after unprotected sex to prevent pregnancy, has been available without a prescription since 2005. But anyone wanting it had to ask the pharmacist and often fill out a screening form with personal information that was kept in the pharmacy computer.

Paladin Labs Inc., the Montreal-based producer, said yesterday the National Association of Pharmacy Regulatory Authorities is changing the rules for the sale of Plan B.

> « There were no good reasons not to make it freely available. I'm such an optimist, I'd hoped it would be two years ago. »
> Jane Pepino, chair Ontario Women's Health Council

"Finally ... fabulous! I'm delighted," said Toronto lawyer Jane Pepino last night. Pepino chairs the Ontario Women's Health Council, a long-time opponent of restrictions on the drug.

The council was active in a 2002 pilot project that made the pill available behind the counter in 40 Toronto pharmacies. Some 7,000 women asked for the drug levonorgestrel, reported to be 95 per cent effective if taken within 24 hours.

"Women were aware of it, using it and giving great feedback," Pepino said. "One downside was they had to sit in the pharmacy and tell their intimate sexual history in a not terribly private place. But we can only guess how many unwanted pregnancies it prevented.

"There were no good reasons not to make it freely available. I'm such an optimist, I'd hoped it would be two years ago. We've been working on it, working on it, working on it."

She said the delay could have been "a combination of things: General bureaucratic 'administrivia,' some pressure perhaps brought by anti-choice people, sensitivity on the part of the government not to be seen to be rushing. To be fair, there was research going on. Now we can point to that body of research and be sure of our ground."

Higher fares coming?

Fuel costs may drive up price of riding TTC

Ditching the car in favour of public transit may not be enough to shield commuters from rising fuel costs.

Confronted with galloping diesel prices, TTC officials aren't ruling out the possibility of adding a fuel surcharge to the price of a ride next year.

Although the budget process for 2009 has barely begun, the TTC has to figure out how to deal with a jump in fuel costs expected to rise from about $65 million this year to $97 million next year.

The escalating price of fuel accounts for $25 million of the difference, a boost in service for the remaining $7 million.

"There's $32 million. That's a big increase," said TTC chief general manager Gary Webster. "Where that money's coming from, we don't know."

The TTC's diesel supply contract expires at the end of this year, so the agency will be monitoring prices for a while before signing another contract. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

TTC's no-loss policy

» Because the TTC is not allowed to operate at a loss, a shortfall will force the commission to consider service cuts or price increases. The TTC also faces increased labour costs from a settlement with its union, expected later this year.

Catholic board

New trustee calls meeting disaster

EDUCATION Toronto's Catholic school board is mired in confusion after a decision not to cut programs or lay off teachers this next fall, amid allegations trustees didn't realize what they were voting for and that some took part in the discussion despite a conflict of interest.

Newly appointed trustee Rob Davis even contacted the province's education ministry yesterday about the debacle at the Toronto Catholic District School Board.

"There are a couple of issues," Davis said of Wednesday's committee meeting. "I don't think the meeting was legal, and I don't think the board arrived at the decision properly ..... I have to confess my very first meeting as a school trustee was a disaster." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Well, for the next six weeks anyway, they — that would be Barbara Solomon, Brooke Taylor and Katelynn Ubbi — will have the pleasure of seeing their poster on 70 billboards across Toronto.

All three are 21-year-old, third-year advertising students at the Ontario College of Art and Design. Their poster won first prize in the third annual Astral Media Outdoor Student Design Competition.

Their submission features a photograph of a man with a stylized image of the Toronto skyline tattooed on his back. The logo reads, "i am toronto." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Gay ruling may affect Toronto

In a 4-3 decision yesterday, California's Supreme Court overturned the state's ban on same-sex nuptials, making California the second U.S. state to permit them.

When the court's ruling takes effect in 30 days, Toronto's same-sex wedding industry will face a new challenge from the Golden State.

Toronto established itself as perhaps North America's prime destination for gay marriage after the city began issuing licenses to same-sex couples in June 2003. Now, among Americans, its status is in doubt.

"It is kind of bittersweet," said Justin Ruttan, a gay Toronto wedding planner, laughing. "I'm so happy the States is taking these steps ... But at the same time, it's going to be harder to get those couples to come up here now."

City put to tourist test

Reporter finds out if Torontonians are helpful enough

Seven minutes at Yonge and Sheppard. Thirty seconds at Yonge and St. Clair. And maybe a minute at Front and John.

Torontonians are being asked to be kind to visitors as the city battles to improve its tourism numbers and help those who drop their dollars at local attractions.

The Toronto Star decided to put Toronto to the test and sent out a relatively unthreatening, marginally well-dressed reporter to a few street corners to stand with a map in hand and see how long it would take for Hogtowners to offer help. The results were mostly pretty good.

The reporter also stopped pedestrians to ask for directions to specific attractions. A few iPod isolationists didn't want to be delayed but most everyone was willing to lend a hand. And while they didn't know exactly how to get to all the attractions, everyone who was stopped seemed happy to at least point — often literally — an alleged tourist in the right direction.

Pool closures not only option: Former mayor

Hold off on draining Toronto's school pools — at least until summer.

That is former Toronto mayor David Crombie's message to the Toronto District School Board, and one he repeated last night at a summit organized to try and provide the TDSB with solutions to keep kids swimming.

"The board in its own view needed to draw a line that said we cannot afford these pools. But there may be some other solutions," said Crombie yesterday at the event, part of the Toronto Sports Council Summit Series, entitled The Future of Aquatics in Toronto.

The meeting was attended by parents, teachers, members from the aquatic advocacy group Let's Make Waves, and representatives from the city and organizations like the YMCA.

Without funding more than 20 pools could be empty by June, with about 40 pools in schools across the city slated for drainage this year or next.

Clues sought in death

Police officers were joined by relatives, friends and other Somali community members as they canvassed the residents of the 20-floor building where a 16-year-old was beaten to death in a stairwell nearly two weeks ago.

Last night they hoped "putting a human touch" on interviews by involving those close to victim Mahamed Abdi Warsame might coax reluctant witnesses to come forward. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

TTC seeking funds for upgrades

Wants to speed making subway accessible for all

The TTC wants to accelerate its plans for becoming fully accessible to disabled passengers. The transit system is on target to offer such service on all its underground and surface routes by 2020. But officials say that's not good enough, given the growing demand.

They want the province to provide an extra $9.5 million annually to speed upgrades to subway stations to make them all accessible by 2017. Another $500,000 next year would allow the TTC to reduce by half the 2 per cent of Wheel-Trans requests that aren't filled now because the service isn't adequate.

Demand for paratransit trips is expected to increase 6.5 per cent this year.

Being able to use the regular system would be life-altering for riders like Penny Lamy, who uses a scooter and serves as chair of the TTC's Advisory Committee on Accessible Transportation.

Although 64 per cent of TTC customers use the subway, only 28 of 69 stations are fully accessible with elevators, accessible fare gates and textured flooring that helps visually impaired people find their way.

public forum

» The TTC will hold its first annual public forum on disabilities issues at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Canadian National Institute for the Blind at 1929 Bayview Ave.

The TTC is expected to award a contract in the fall for 204 fully accessible, low-floor streetcars, but they won't be fully operational until at least 2017. Meanwhile, streetcar riders must be able to climb steps.

The bus system should be fully accessible by 2010. An automated stop call and display system being installed on TTC buses should be complete next month. For now, drivers are calling the stops. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

City delays plan to buy more local food

Move aimed at reducing trucking

Despite heavy pressure from Mayor David Miller's inner circle to move on his green agenda, a committee of councillors yesterday voted to delay taking action on a proposal to buy more food locally and cut down on trucking until the committee meets July 9.

Miller's much-touted climate policy passed unanimously last July, and Franz Hartmann, executive director of the Toronto Environmental Alliance, said a key component was buying more food locally for city-run homes for the aged, daycare centres and homeless shelters.

The city spends $11 million annually on food for those facilities, and the idea was to earmark $100,000 this year to cover any extra costs from boosting the percentage purchased locally. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

LipiLossIR is the use of infrared technology during Infusion LipiLoss to extra-corporally dissolve unwanted fat at the cellular level. Ultrasonic LipiLoss and LipiLossIR operates in much the same way ultrasound/light-energy is used to breakdown and flush kidney stones out of the body without making surgical incisions. LipiLoss is used to dissolve fat and cellulite in the following areas: Thighs, Love handles, Hips, Double chins, Tummy and any other area with unwanted fat.

LipiLoss vs. Liposuction. Unlike Liposuction, LipiLoss does not involve the making of surgical incisions, there is no bandages and no anaesthesia. LipiLoss is effective for treating cellulite as well as fat, whearas liposuction is not effective for cellulite treatment. LipiLoss is effective in treating small areas of adipose/fat accumulation; persons who have larger areas of fat to remove will typically obtain better results from surgical liposuction. Like liposuction, LipiLoss is not a weight-loss procedure and neither is a substitute for diet and exercise – the success of both LipiLoss and liposuction are generally best measured in inches lost (not pounds lost). LipiLoss takes place over a series of treatments and there is no down time – you are able to return to your normal activities immediately after each procedure.

Superior to Mesotherapy! Proprietary LipiLoss is a stabilized formulation developed based on the results of clinical studies and uses Health Canada and FDA-approved medical devices. This stabilized formulation is the foundation of LipiLoss' superiority over mesotherapy and other infusion protocols. Unlike LipiLoss, mesotherapy has no consistency in its formulation and therefore no consistency in its results. LipiLoss works! And Möcelle® Edan is it's exclusive authorized provider.

Sex change covered

Ontario to pay for reassignment operations

Ontario will soon join other provinces in providing coverage for sex-change surgery under the province's health insurance plan, Health Minister George Smitherman confirmed yesterday.

cancelled in 1998

» Ontario's previous Conservative government cancelled coverage of sex-change operations in 1998, leaving some people stranded midway through the process.

Smitherman said the details have not been finalized, but Ontario will start paying for sexual reassignment surgery for the first time in 10 years, providing coverage for the limited number of people who qualify for the procedure.

"It's the government's intention to move forward with the provision of services on about the same level as they were (when) cancelled some number of years ago," he said.

"(It would) probably affect between eight and 10 people in Ontario, who after having very, very sustained psychological evaluations would be deemed by the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health as appropriate candidates to receive a surgical intervention." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Groups divided over Paralympics protest

Torch run for Games to make Vancouver stop

Tibetan rights activists are split over whether to protest the 2008 Paralympic Games torch when it arrives in Vancouver.

One group says they're not ruling it out, while another says the Paralympic Games torch relay has no connection to the issue of Tibet and should not be the target of protest.

Worldwide protests with a focus on China's treatment of Tibet have dogged the torch relay for the 2008 Beijing Games as it has travelled around the world, but it made no stops in Canada.

For the Paralympic Games, only three international stops are being made — Vancouver, London and Sochi, Russia, all sites of upcoming Olympics.

"We will certainly take any opportunity to drive home China's human rights but it's depending upon both the timing and also how the talks between the government of China and representatives of His Holiness the Dalai Lama are going at that point," said Dermod Travis of the Canada Tibet Committee's intentions to protest the torch.

planned route

» The proposed route for the Canadian leg of the relay will see it travel to Whistler, B.C. and from Vancouver's city hall into Chinatown over two days in late August.

Canadian Autumn Kelly, seen at Cheltenham Race course in England with Peter Phillips, son of Britain's Princess Anne, in this 2006 file photo, will marry Queen Elizabeth II's grandson tomorrow.

Royal spring wedding for Autumn

Those who know Autumn Kelly say she's the product of a commoner's upbringing in the heart of Canadian suburbia.

But that's about to change as she is due to wed the Queen's eldest grandson, Peter Phillips, in a private ceremony tomorrow in England.

The regal affair, where she will rub elbows with 300 guests including the Queen, Prince Philip, Prince Charles and his wife Camilla, has monarchists drooling.

But back home in her old Montreal burb of Pointe-Claire, most people are shrugging off the idea one of their own is about to marry the man who is 11th in line for the British crown.

"It's like a non-issue on our street, it's just business as usual," said Katherine Fauteux, who lives across the road from the house where Kelly lived for more than a decade. THE CANADIAN PRESS

HIV-positive man guilty of sex assault

A Halifax man was found guilty of aggravated sexual assault yesterday for not telling his former girlfriend he's HIV positive before having unprotected sex with her.

Blaine Arthur Holland, 36, sat quietly beside his lawyer as the decision was rendered in Nova Scotia Supreme Court.

In his decision, Justice Arthur Pickup said it came down to the credibility of Holland and his ex-girlfriend, a 37-year-old woman from Halifax.

The woman said she only learned of Holland's condition toward the end of their relationship in March 2006. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Students lecture drivers

Speeders 'touched' by novel approach

Tearful driver Patty Ryan vowed to slow down as she hugged the girl she had just "killed" on an Oshawa street.

"Did you know you were speeding and have struck me dead?" Felicia Petric, 16, told her moments earlier.

Ryan, who had been doing 63 km/h in a 50 zone, was one of 63 motorists lectured by high school students yesterday in an innovative approach to deterring speeders by Durham Region police.

"This is a damn good idea," said Ryan. "It can save a life."

The idea was to teach safety driving principles to both drivers and students, who included traffic statistics, consequences of bad driving and personal tales in their messages. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Wait times unfair: OMA

The Ontario government's focus on reducing wait times in key areas such as hip and knee replacements is leaving people with bad backs, shoulder problems and other health issues farther behind, the president of the Ontario Medical Association said yesterday.

Dr. Ken Arnold said all patients deserve speedy access to medical care, not just those with problems that the government has identified as a priority.

"It seems a little unfair that although some people are doing well under this (wait times strategy) others are left behind," Arnold said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

China death toll soars

Officials warn numbers could reach 50,000 dead

animals first to know

» First, the water level in a pond inexplicably plunged. Then, thousands of toads appeared on streets in a nearby province. Finally, just hours before China's worst earthquake in three decades, animals at a local zoo began acting strangely. Now, Chinese bloggers are asking why the government didn't pay closer attention to warning signs.

China warned yesterday that the death toll from this week's earthquake could soar to 50,000 as the government issued a rare public appeal for rescue equipment as it struggled to cope with the disaster. Rescue workers broke through key roads to the epicentre in the race to find survivors.

More than 72 hours after the quake rattled central China, rescuers appeared to shift from going through downed buildings for survivors to the grim duty of searching for bodies in Monday's tremor.

The official death toll reached at least 19,500 in Sichuan province alone where Monday's quake was centred, Vice-Gov. Li Chengyun told a news conference in the provincial capital of Chengdu. The figure was up from nearly 15,000 confirmed dead the day before. But the State Council, the country's cabinet, said the number could rise to some 50,000, state TV reported. The government issued a rare appeal to the Chinese public calling for donations of rescue equipment including hammers, shovels, demolition tools and rubber boats. The plea on the Ministry of Information Industry's website said that 100 cranes were needed.

Myanmar cyclone toll crosses 43,000

Junta keeps aid agencies' foreign staff in Yangon

Myanmar state television says the official cyclone death toll to has climbed to more than 43,000.

The figure, broadcast yesterday night, was almost 5,000 more than that released Wednesday by the military government.

trading aid

» Myanmar's junta says legal action will be taken against people who trade, hoard or misuse international aid for cyclone survivors. The warning was issued today on state radio amid reports that foreign aid was being sold openly in markets.

The number of missing has remained at nearly 28,000 for at least two days.

The United Nations and others estimate that well over 100,000 people may have died in the disaster.

Myanmar's junta has allowed the UN and some other agencies to hand out aid directly to cyclone victims.

But it has prohibited their few foreign staff from leaving Yangon, the country's main city.

Charges in MySpace suicide

A federal grand jury yesterday indicted a woman for her alleged role in perpetrating a hoax on MySpace against a 13-year-old neighbour girl who then committed suicide.

Lori Drew of Missouri allegedly helped create a MySpace account on false premises to contact Megan Meier, who thought she was chatting with a 16-year-old boy named Josh Evans, who turned out not to exist.

Megan hanged herself at home in October 2006 after receiving cruel messages, including one stating the world would be better without her.

Drew is charged with one count of conspiracy and three counts of accessing protected computers.

Obama hits back at Bush

White House denies comments directed at Barack

Democratic front-runner Barack Obama accused President George W. Bush of launching a "sad" and "false" political attack on him yesterday by saying those in favour of talking to terrorists and radicals are like Nazi appeasers.

The White House denied Bush's words in a speech to Israel's parliament were directed at Obama, but the flap drew angry retorts from U.S. Democrats who called it "unprecedented" and "totally inappropriate."

Obama shot back with a strong statement to counter claims that he's a foreign policy lightweight less prepared than Democratic rival Hillary Clinton to take on Republicans this fall.

"It is sad that President Bush would use a speech to the Knesset on the 60th anniversary of Israel's independence to launch a false personal attack," he said.

National security spokesman Gordon Johndroe said Bush was referring to "a wide range of people who have talked to or suggested we talk to Hamas, Hezbollah.

Big 3 reach deal

Autoworkers' wages frozen

reprieve for Oshawa plants

» Under the deal reached with GM yesterday, the Oshawa plant will begin producing a rear-wheel drive car in addition to the Camaro sports car.
» The shutdown of a second shift at the Oshawa truck assembly plant will be put off from this September until 2009.

The Big Three North American automakers have all signed on to three-year agreements with Canadian workers designed to help rescue the crumbling auto sector.

Under tentative deals that wrapped up yesterday — months ahead of schedule — workers for GM, Chrysler and Ford will have their pay frozen. They will get improvements in other areas and many will keep their jobs as plants that were slated to be shut down get at least a temporary reprieve and some facilities begin producing new vehicles and parts.

The deal avoids the two-tier wage system accepted by the union representing U.S. autoworkers last year, under which new hires are paid less per hour than long-time employees, allowing the automakers to cut labour costs.

Housing boom over but no bust

Canada's cooling real-estate sector is slowly moving toward a more balanced market, but there won't be any bust like in the U.S. following the subprime mortgage crisis, Scotiabank economist Adrienne Warren said yesterday following the release of several housing reports.

The bank forecast overall sales 15 per cent below last year's record levels, with home prices increasing on average about 5 per cent.

"Home prices in Canada are not substantially overvalued," she pointed out. "There is still little evidence of widespread speculative home buying that often accompanies the late stages of a housing boom."

As well, the market is not overbuilt and households are not excessively indebted, she added.

Flyers fend off Penguins

Philadelphia avoids sweep with 4-2 victory

FLYERS 4 PENGUINS 2

The Pittsburgh Penguins will have to wait at least a few more days to make their travel plans for the Stanley Cup final.

Jeff Carter, Daniel Briere and Joffrey Lupul scored first-period goals and the Philadelphia Flyers refused to die in front of their home fans, hanging on for a 4-2 win last night and forcing a fifth game in the Eastern Conference final.

Jordan Staal had two third-period goals as the Penguins made things interesting but still lost for only the second time in the playoffs.

The Flyers got in Marc-Andre Fleury's face for the first time in the series on a consistent basis, making his job a little more difficult by crashing the crease, screening the goalie and fighting for rebounds around him. Away from the net, the Flyers made the Penguins pay for the puck, delivering their most physical game of the series with timely hits.

Lupul also added an empty netter while Martin Biron was solid for the Flyers with a 36-save effort. The teams engaged in several late-game tussles, highlighted by Penguins phenom Sidney Crosby mixing it up with Flyers captain Mike Richards with 13 seconds left and the game well in hand.

The Penguins left their 'A' game at the hotel in the opening 30 minutes. They were beat to loose pucks, made too many poor decisions with passes and played what was arguably their worst game of the post-season.

They'll have yet another crack at clinching their first Cup berth in 16 years Sunday (CBC, 3 p.m. ET) in Pittsburgh. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Inglett lifts Jays to sweep

Pinch-hitter Joe Inglett sliced a two-out, bases-loaded single through the infield in the 11th inning, lifting the Toronto Blue Jays over the Minnesota Twins 3-2 yesterday for a three-game sweep.

Minnesota's Justin Morneau of New Westminster, B.C., reached base three times and drove in a run on his 27th birthday.

Shawn Camp (1-1) picked up the victory by getting the last out of the 10th, and B.J. Ryan finished off the Twins by converting his seventh save in as many attempts. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Avery tilts on Pinball

YORK REPORT
MARTY YORK
marty.york@metronews.ca

Barking up the wrong tree these days is John Avery, who has damaged his CFL status by insulting and criticizing Michael Clemons.

This is tantamount to, say, dissing Mother Teresa. I mean, seriously, how foolish can you be?

In his two decades as a Hall of Fame player, coach and executive with the Toronto Argonauts, Pinball Clemons has established himself as the CFL's version of Mother Teresa, with countless acts of kindness, humanity and benevolence. Heck, this is a dude who once removed the shoes from his feet, gave them to a needy child in an Ottawa hospital and then walked to his hotel room in his socks — IN THE RAIN!

No one knocks Pinball. No one, that is, except Avery, who was released by the Argos in January after four years of underachieving as a highly-paid running back. Clemons was Avery's coach.

We figured Clemons showed remarkable patience in keeping Avery on the payroll. Avery didn't see it that way.

"The biggest disappointment I had was Clemons," Avery told reporters earlier this month. "He brought me in and made me believe he had my best interests in mind and was going to look out for me. (Then) he basically stepped back and let (negative developments) happen."

Now, Avery can't find a CFL job. Even the Hamilton Pussy-Cats flatly rejected him.

This is a league that will employ drug addicts and potheads and convicts and troublemakers and NFL discards such as Andre Rison, Ricky Williams, David Boston, Charles Rogers and, soon, maybe even Chris Henry, but there's no room in the CFL for John Avery.

This is what happens when you have the audacity to backstab Michael Clemons.

» Soon, when the Tampa Bay Lightning fire John Tortorella, there will be seven NHL teams without a coach ... There's no reason to suggest U.S. President George W. Bush knows more about baseball than anything else, but he likes the Blue Jays' Roy Halladay. Halladay is 4-5. Bush said: "He's a steady guy. He burns up innings."

» More on maple bats: Philadelphia Phillies general manager Pat Gillick compares them to "missiles" and is openly worried about the safety of fans in the stands.

The Chronicles Of Narnia:
Prince Caspian

Director Andrew Adamson
PG

CHRIS ATCHISON
chris.atchison@metronews.ca

Ben Barnes stars in The Chronicles Of Narnia: Prince Caspian.

REVIEW IT'S NO SECRET that special effects advances in the past 15 years have dramatically changed the movie-going experience. Nowhere is this more noticeable than in the science fiction and fantasy genres where scenes that at one time would have been impossible to shoot are now realized with seeming ease using sophisticated computer-generated imagery.

The Chronicles Of Narnia films are a perfect example of these advancements put to good use, the latest installment of which — Prince Caspian — proves once again that filmmakers are treating fantasy novels with loving respect when it comes time to adapt them for the big screen. The second film in the series — based on the second of author C.S. Lewis' Narnia books — sees Peter, Susan, Edmund and Lucy transported from Second World War London to Narnia through a subway station.

One year has passed in Earth time since their last adventure, translating to about 1,300 Narnian years. Much has changed in the mystical world as the talking animals and creatures that once dominated the landscape have long since faded into folklore.

Now the Telmarines, a race of humans, control the land.

A cast of characters including the Black Dwarf Nikabrik (Warwick Davis), the cynical dwarf Trumpkin (Peter Dinklage) and a swashbuckling mouse named Reepicheep (Eddie Izzard) help the four Pevensie kids restore Narnia to its former glory.

Oscar-nominated director Andrew Adamson (Shrek, Shrek 2) does a fine job bringing Lewis' story to life with a blend of old-fashioned sword fights and dazzling special effects — the climactic final battle is spectacular and well worth the wait. His screenplay, co-written with Christopher Markus and Stephen McFeely, is a satisfying continuation from where The Lion, The Witch, and the Wardrobe left off, all the while incorporating theatrical scenes that only build on Lewis' brilliantly-detailed story. It should be noted, however, that seeing The Lion, The Witch And The Wardrobe is important for those who actually want to follow the storyline.

It's not impossible to pick up on the action, but it will only enhance the viewing experience for fans in yet another well-casted, well-written entry into what will surely be a long-running Narnia series.

Bittersweet genius

Flight Of The Red Balloon

Stars Juliette Binoche, Fang Song

Director Hsiao-hsien Hou

PG

By ADAM NAYMAN
for Metro Toronto

Hsiao-hsien Hou's Flight Of The Red Balloon.

REVIEW THE TAIWANESE director Hou Hsiao-Hsien has always had a genius for slow, drifting camera movements, and Flight of the Red Balloon — inspired by Albert Lamorisse's beloved 1956 short about a boy and his inflatable best friend — starts with a gorgeously choreographed sequence that assumes the same swirling, weightless trajectory as the eponymous sphere as it floats through present-day Paris.

It's a bravura opening, and it quickly establishes the main difference between Hou's homage and Lamorisse's original; this time out, the balloon is less a constant pal than a benign observer. The film still revolves around a little boy, seven-year-old Simon (Simon Itaneu), but his guardian this time out is human: Song (Song Fang), a Chinese film student studying in Paris who works as his nanny. She's been hired by Suzanne (Juliette Binoche), a perpetually frazzled puppeteer whose cluttered apartment reflects her chaotic personal life. Song, who is working on her own homage to Lamorisse, takes a supremely self-effacing tack in her duties yet exerts a calming influence on Suzanne's household — hovering protectively, not unlike a certain red balloon.

One might say that "not a lot happens" in Flight of the Red Balloon, but that would ignore the complexity of Hou's contemplative style (which frequently renders the mundane breathtaking) and also the subtlety of his themes. This remake of a classic is fittingly preoccupied with the link between the past and the present (Suzanne asks Song to transfer 8mm home movies to DVD), and with the idea that the anxieties and hopes of childhood are an eternal state. "Is this a happy picture or a sad picture?" asks a museum guide showing a painting to Simon and his classmates. A small voice opines that it's both, and there you have it. The Flight of the Red Balloon is a bittersweet masterpiece.

Morgan Spurlock joins the hunt for America's most wanted man.

Spurlock strikes again

Where In The World Is Osama Bin Laden?

Director Morgan Spurlock

PG

By STEVE GOW
for Metro Toronto

REVIEW BY FEASTING on fatty foods for his hit documentary Super Size Me, Morgan Spurlock wrestled with one of the world's biggest corporate fast-food giants. Now, with Where in the World is Osama bin Laden?, Spurlock is upsizing his canvass to take on another international brand name — al Qaeda.

As he did with Super Size Me, Spurlock takes centre stage, exposing himself first-hand to the Muslim world in search of al Qaeda's lead conductor.

Why, you ask? Well, as in all big summer action flicks, it always comes down to "one lonely man" to catch the bad dude.

Of course, that's only the MacGuffin. In reality, Spurlock goes to shed light on the cultural misconceptions between the Middle East and America.

At this, he does make a few discoveries but mainly, we just learn that both Starbucks and pro wrestling are popular the world over.

Unlike his confrontational counterpart Michael Moore (Sicko), Spurlock's approach works best because he genuinely seems earnest, interested and looking for a laugh. There's surely no denying Spurlock's charm and he keeps things moving using various animated devices (like Osama dancing to M.C. Hammer's "You Can't Touch This" for instance).

However, the problem here is that the movie pretty much exposes what most folks likely already know — that America is suffering a terrible PR problem in the Middle East. After spending a week in Egypt, Spurlock is surprised to find that America's image is damaged. Hell, I could've told him that before he jumped on the plane.

In the end, you may not find yourself enlightened, but then again, maybe you will. A lot of people were shocked to find out eating nothing but cheeseburgers is bad for you too.

Quote OF THE WEEK

"It's flattering that anybody still cares about these characters. But it's like an amoeba — ever-growing and out of control."

Karen Allen reprises her role as Marion Ravenwood in the newest Indiana Jones movie.

Indy's back after 19 years

Solid story was the film's impetus, co-star Allen says

By CHRIS ATCHISON
for Metro Toronto

FEATURE IT TOOK nearly two decades, but swashbuckling archaeologist Indiana Jones is finally back with bullwhip and fedora in hand, ready to blast his way back into movie theatres.

The 19-year delay in returning the iconic adventurer to the big screen in the series' fourth installment, Indiana Jones And The Kingdom Of The Crystal Skull, has occupied fans of the series who have spent years begging for Indy's return.

His delay, it seems, was due in large part to quality control concerns on the part of his creators.

Producer George Lucas and director Steven Spielberg originally envisioned a trilogy which they completed in 1989 with Indiana Jones And The Last Crusade, according to Raiders Of The Lost Ark star Karen Allen (Animal House, Starman).

But when she got the call to reprise her role as the strong-willed Marion Ravenwood in Kingdom Of The Crystal Skull, Allen learned that a solid story idea, not a lack of will, had been stopping Lucas and Spielberg from bringing Indy to life once again.

"I think the real problem, as I know from conversations with George and Steven, is that they didn't see a point in doing one unless they could come up with a story that was really going to be great and worthy of continuing," Allen recalls.

This installment of the series pits Dr. Jones against evil agents of the Soviet Union led by the villainous Irina Spalko (Oscar-winner Cate Blanchett) and includes a new sidekick, Mutt Williams (Transformers' Shia LaBeouf), who helps the adventurer in his quest to find the highly-coveted crystal skull.

While the film is probably the most hyped of this summer's blockbusters — and perhaps the most highly-anticipated movie in years — the 56-year-old Allen admits that when shooting began on Raiders Of The Lost Ark, she had no idea she was part of what would eventually become a cultural phenomenon.

"I had never seen those Saturday afternoon serials and I thought we were making Casablanca," Allen says of the short films upon which the Indiana Jones series was originally based. "I was too young an actor and had no sense of the experience of a blockbuster type of film."

But the question looms, why, after such a long hiatus, was Indiana Jones worth revisiting?

"I think it comes down to good storytelling," Allen explains. "(The stories are) mythic, there's suspense, there's humour and at the centre of the whole thing there's Harrison playing Indiana Jones who is a real, iconic hero.

"As George Lucas says, he's like you and me. He's not a superhero, he's a human hero. He has all kinds of foibles, all kinds of flaws. He can laugh at himself and make us laugh with him and I think there's something unique about that."

Indiana Jones And The Kingdom Of The Crystal Skull opens Thursday.

Where In The World Is Osama Bin Laden director Morgan Spurlock.

CHRIS ATCHISON/METRO TORONTO

Next up: Most wanted man

From McDonald's to Osama Bin Laden

By CHRIS ATCHISON
for Metro Toronto

FEATURE IN APRIL 2004, few had heard of writer-producer-director Morgan Spurlock, whose credits to that point included just a handful of plays and a gross-out show for MTV called I Bet You Will.

One month later his documentary Super Size Me was released, chronicling the one month Spurlock spent on a steady diet of McDonald's — three Mcmeals a day, no exceptions, resulting in an extra 24 pounds tacked onto his normally lean frame.

He quickly graduated from the ranks of small-time filmmaker to that of giant killer as audiences flocked to theatres to take in his message about the potential dangers of a fast food lifestyle.

McDonald's immediately began trying to discredit the film, but that publicity only fuelled Super Size Me's blazing box office figures which eventually topped $20 million worldwide, according to the ticket sale aggregator Boxofficemojo.com.

The film was nominated that year for the Academy Award for best documentary, but ultimately lost to Ross Kauffman and Zana Briski's Born Into Brothels.

Then in 2006, Spurlock decided to embark on yet another extreme filmmaking mission. This time around instead of taking on fast food giants, he would take on public enemy number one — terrorist leader and 9/11 mastermind Osama Bin Laden — or at least try to find him in the new documentary Where In The World Is Osama Bin Laden?

The five month shoot took Spurlock to a variety of Middle Eastern locales ranging from Afghanistan's dangerous Tora Bora region, to the relatively peaceful neighbourhoods of Jerusalem in a pursuit of Al Qaeda's number one man — assuming he was still alive and at large.

But in the midst of the project, Spurlock learned he and his wife were due to have a baby, complicating his globetrotting plans.

"Once I found out Alex and I were having a baby, the focus shifted to the kind of world I was bringing a kid into," Spurlock explains.

"We started adding to our list of terrorist experts, terrorists themselves and extremists, people with kids and families. I wanted to meet people like that who were what I was going to be. I'm going to be a father, give me some advice. What's it like being a dad? I wanted to try to connect with people on a level that's much different than a political view."

Spurlock says the documentary was intended less as a statement about the war on terror, U.S. foreign policy and the cross-cultural similarities that exist but regularly elude us, than it was as a primer for a greater conversation about those issues and their impact on the world today.

"One of the things I wanted the film to accomplish was to go beyond two-minute sound bites in the news," he says.

"I think the film paints a much larger picture of the state of the world, at least in the Middle East. Another thing I think the movie does really well is it starts to show the diversity of Islam ... there's a big range (of cultures in the Muslim world) and you see that in this movie."

Where In The World Is Osama Bin Laden opens today.

Dinklage trumps Trumpkin

By CHRIS ATCHISON
for Metro Toronto

FEATURE LIKE SO MANY people born in the late 1960s, actor Peter Dinklage (The Station Agent) grew up in George Lucas' alternate universe where wookies, jawas, droids and a mysterious power called the Force ruled the day.

He would watch and rewatch the Star Wars movies, finding himself transfixed by their otherworldly storylines, conflicted characters and cutting-edge special effects.

It's no surprise, then, that he leapt at the chance to play Trumpkin, a cynical red dwarf, in The Chronicles Of Narnia: Prince Caspian, the second film in the Narnia series based on the novels of famed children's fantasy writer C.S. Lewis.

"I grew up on Star Wars and suddenly I'm in one of these movies that's like what I grew up on and it's such a thrill," Dinklage says. "I love movies about the modern day miseries of living in New York and stuff like that if they're done well, but there's nothing like a matinee fantasy film."

The success and overwhelming number of films or full-blown franchises based on fantasy novels that have been produced in the past decade – Harry Potter, The Lord Of The Rings and The Golden Compass, for example — are proof that movie-going audiences share Dinklage's love of the genre.

Peter Dinklage plays Trumpkin in Chronicles Of Narnia: Prince Caspian.

The 38-year-old actor considers that perspective a unique one. His stature often leads to his casting as mythical characters in film so by his own assessment, Dinklage knows a worthwhile fantasy film elf or dwarf when he sees one.

He feels the rich characterizations of the Narnia stories have given the books a definitive literary relevance that has maintained their popularity since first being published by Lewis in the 1950s.

"Being four-and-a-half feet tall I've always thought that dwarves and characters like that in fantasy books were really set dressing, were just creatures and didn't have personalities," he says.

"But with these books, all of them, even the talking mouse, are really fully-drawn characters and bring you into that world."

To play Trumpkin, Dinklage drew on the fantasy heroes of his youth and applied elements of their personalities to bring his crusty character to life.

"There's a modern sensibility to Trumpkin, he has a modern wit about him and about his size and, like me, a sense of humour about my size," he says.

"I'm always drawn to the sense of humour in the fantasy world where sword fights are happening all around you, you need that core of cynicism and humour. So I really liked that. I knew I would be that voice of reason in this world of wonderment."

Prince Caspian opens in theatres today.

Singer Duffy is among the British female artists making a mark on this side of the Atlantic, but don't compare her to songstress Amy Winehouse. "I prefer to be not known than to be known as something completely wrong," she says.

The next British invasion

Duffy joins wave of female singers crossing Atlantic

Profile THE SINGER KNOWN simply as Duffy sits next to a clear blue swimming pool on a hotel rooftop patio, the sun setting behind her blond bouffant. She takes a sip of her drink, widens her blue eyes and grins.

"Just like the movies!" she exclaims about the setting — repeating a waiter's observation.

It all does seem just like the movies and a long journey for an ambitious gal raised in a tiny town in North Wales who now lives in London.

Just hours earlier, she performed her '60s-inspired hit Mercy for the first time on U.S. television, singing her heart out for a taping of The Tonight Show with Jay Leno. A day earlier, she played to a sweaty crowd at the Coachella Valley Music and Arts Festival in the California desert. Her album Rockferry — already a chart-topping smash in England — made its North American debut this week.

British singer Duffy released her debut album Rockferry in North America this week

The 23-year-old — born Aimee Anne Duffy — is one of several young female singers from the United Kingdom descending on North America.

Amy Winehouse, whose double-platinum U.S. debut Back To Black album won five Grammys earlier this year, and fellow London crooner Lily Allen's critically acclaimed debut, Alright, Still, may have jump-started this so-called British Invasion. But Duffy and others such as chart-topper Leona Lewis, Adele, Kate Nash, Laura Marling, Estelle and Amy MacDonald are mapping out their own paths from Europe to North America, and the women are all unique.

Still, some have dubbed them the "new Amys."

Duffy sighs at the comparisons.

"I kind of want to be left alone a little bit, with that. I want to hide. I prefer to be not known than to be known as something completely wrong."

Producer Mark Ronson, who won a Grammy this year for his work with Winehouse and has produced for Allen, said people are intrigued about British female artists now because before those singers made a flourish in 2007, British women hadn't had much of an impact on the charts in recent years.

"For a long time, the female solo artist, all of the U.S. pop ones ... had a real stranglehold on the pop music charts," Ronson said.

"They really broke open the door I think for a lot of other artists, even though I don't think any of them sound the same," added Ronson, who is also a producer for Adele and Estelle (the singer-rapper described as a British Lauryn Hill).

Lewis has had the most success in the post-Winehouse era. Her debut album, "Spirit," debuted at the top of the charts in March and is nearing platinum status and her song "Bleeding Love" became the first by a British female to top Billboard's Hot 100 chart in 21 years.

Nash also performed at Coachella. Singer-songwriter Adele (full name Adele Adkins) has gained fans for her bluesy voice and unabashed curves: Her debut CD 19, platinum-selling album in Britain, is due out here in June.

Krissi Murison, deputy editor of British music magazine New Music Express, said attention paid to these women, and female-fronted British bands such as the Duke Spirit and the Ting Tings, is growing.

"I think it's really exciting. The pop charts were very very bland here. And the same in the U.S., I think," she continued. "These women don't seem to have gone through that manufacturing. They're funny, dark in places. They have an edgy humour and personality, (they are) a breath of fresh air."

Duffy

Album: Rockferry
Label: A&M/Rough Trade
Release Date: May 13

DUFFY IS THE LATEST in a line of female '60s soul revivalists from the U.K., but Rockferry showcases a fresh mix of that era's more elegant elements. Sweeps of string sections, smooth guitar licks and tambourine shakes complement the arrangements, creating a stark, but classic Motown feel with just the right blend of tenderness and drama. The production is thick, but suits a voice that crosses somewhere between Dusty Springfield and Diana Ross, helping these love songs soar away from standard retro ground.

While Duffy may lack the power of classic girl-groups, of all the new blue-eyed soul sirens she may be the leader of the pack.

Death Cab For Cutie

Album: Narrow Stairs
Label: Atlantic Records
Release Date: May 13

DESCRIBED BY LEAD guitarist Chris Walla as "having teeth," Death Cab For Cutie's Narrow Stairs is a departure from the band's usual delicate fare. Though sonically similar to 2005's Plans, Stairs is a vastly darker, yet strangely compelling album bordering on the edge of despair.

Comprised of ghostly guitar riffs, distorted vocals, and layers of disorienting feedback, the album's bold new arrangements perfectly complement front man Ben Gibbard's harrowing and intriguingly morose lyrics.

Death Cab For Cutie follows up 2005's Plans with new album Narrow Stairs.

Neil Diamond

Album: Home Before Dark
Label: Columbia Records
Release Date: May 6

DIAMOND SOLICITS THE help of Rick Rubin once again, and the producer's touch is evident on the Songwriting Hall of Famer's latest work: Much like the late Johnny Cash's American Recordings series, it opts for a pared-down sound steeped in solitude and introspection. Fearing loneliness at 67, his muse is his girlfriend (If I Don't See You Again). Home Before Dark has great moments (a duet with Dixie Chick Natalie Maines on Another Day That Time Forgot), but can also skirt the maudlin (No Words).

The Wet Secrets

Album: Rock Fantasy
Label: Rodeo Peanut Records
Release Date: May 13

WHAT THIS EDMONTON band lacks in substance they make up for style and bravado. And really, when you are in a dance rock marching band, what's more important, substance or matching uniforms? A side project of members of Shout Out Out Out Out, the Wet Secrets have a knack for catchy hooks that combine electonica, trumpets and pep rally enthusiasm. The result is a dance party that's a bit tongue in cheek, but hard not to enjoy.

JOHN ORR/METRO TORONTO

Jason Mraz

Album: We Sing, We Dance, We Steal Things.
Label: Atlantic/Warner
Release Date: May 13

WHO ON EARTH advised the Virginia-born, San Diego-based songster to ditch the rap-cum-scat-inspired wordplay pop of his first two discs in favour of more Starbucks-friendly middle-of-the-road smooth jazz-pop? Sure, all the squeaky-clean arranged horn, string and choir backdrops sound pleasant enough. But Mraz sounds far less inspired to go the all-the-lyrics-you-can-fit stylings of, say, The Dynamo Of Volition and more interested in pursuing safer, inoffensive fare threaten to place him on par as a new-generation — perhaps even lighter — Phil Collins or, in the case of Only Human, George Michael. Don't make us add more "zzzzs" to your name, please?

Bachelorette back for more

New season sees return of DeAnna

By SANDY CAETANO
Metro Toronto

Profile DEANNA PAPAS had her heart broken last November when she was dumped by the then Bachelor Brad Womack — but it's her turn now to hand out the roses as this season's new Bachelorette.

It was the first time in Bachelor history that neither of the final two women were given a rose or a ring. Since then, Papas admits she's been out on one date, which went nowhere fast.

"I was on one date since Brad. One date, and it obviously did not go very well," Papas said from New York during a press call. "It was a friend of mine, and we just went to dinner and I realized that he's just a friend."

Even though Womack decided he didn't want to continue a relationship with either Papas or Jenni Croft, a 27-year-old Phoenix Suns cheerleader from Wichita, Kansas, Papas says she's happy he made the decision he did.

"I was really confused when it happened but after it was all over ... I was actually very happy that Brad ... didn't propose to someone just because he was under pressure," she says. "I'm thankful that he didn't propose to me, everything happens for a reason and I'm where I am today because of all of it, and I'm very happy for that."

After her heartbreak on The Bachelor, ABC selected Papas as their newest Bachelorette. This fourth instalment of the romantic reality series, premiering on ABC Monday at 9 p.m. ET and on Citytv Thursday at 9 p.m ET, will follow the 25-year-old realtor from Newnan, Ga., as she tries her shot at love, hoping to find someone she can settle down with.

With 25 men for her to choose from, all of which have the characteristics she's looking for in a life partner, Papas says it was a great journey and one she doesn't regret. So what is this single lady looking for in a mate? "I cannot date someone who smokes, that is a definite no-no. If he's wishy-washy and doesn't know what he wants that's another no-no. Anything else I'm pretty open to," says Papas.

Fox rues comedies' fate

IDIOT BOX
RICK McGINNIS
rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

FOX ON THE RUN: "It used to be that Fox could always be counted on to make something genuinely funny," wrote Tim Goodman in the San Francisco Chronicle this week, surveying the wreckage at the end of this year's TV season, "a sitcom that was fearless in execution, wicked and original. But those days appear long gone," he laments, noting that Fox was, at least in 2007-2008, trying to be "CBS Lite" with shows like 'Til Death and Back To You — three-camera laugh track sitcoms featuring stars from recent hits that did little to push the envelope or appeal to young viewers.

This sort of advice to innovate would be fine in a world where Two And A Half Men isn't the biggest comedy in primetime and According To Jim didn't get renewed year after year in spite of the fact that we're hard pressed to name a single person who watches it. Jim fans are, as far as we can tell, like the Nixon voters who gave him a landslide victory in 1972 despite the fact that people like New Yorker film critic Pauline Kael didn't know anyone who cast their ballot for him. We suspect that, like Kael's Nixon voters, Jim watchers are out there, right next to us, and we don't know they're their because their vote, like their choice of show, is their little secret, and they know how we'll react anyway.

With the cancellation last week of Back To You, it looks like Fox might be pulling back from the middle-of-the-road comedy, but star Kelsey Grammar obviously didn't want to say goodbye so quickly, and a story on Reuters has him personally lobbying CBS and its chief exec, Les Moonves, to get the network to take on the show that, according to Tim Goodman, was a better fit there.

Moonves told Grammar on Monday that they were "thinking about it," but by Tuesday it looked like they'd had their think when Grammar talked to CBS' head of entertainment, Nina Tassler. "She dismissed it," Grammar recalled, which means that the star, and 20th Century Fox Television, the show's producer, will have to shop the show around to the remaining networks, though Grammar admitted that he's heard little from the studio.

"I really believe in the show," Grammar said.

Mercado has lots up her sleeve

By SANDY CAETANO
Metro Toronto

Profile MAKING IT to the Top 3 on American Idol is a big accomplishment for many competitors, and for Syesha Mercado it's only the beginning.

Mercado was eliminated during this week's results show, leaving David Cook and David Archuleta moving on to the finals. Throughout the show viewers have watched her grow both as an artist and a young lady, thanks to the advice given to her by the judges and mentors who appeared on the show to coach the competitors.

Now, Mercado is ready to take on the world and make it her stage.

"Well, as I tell people, I want to do everything, and I'm really goal oriented, so I know that whatever goal I set, it can be accomplished whether its within a year's span or 10 years," she says.

Syesha Mercado is the latest contestant on American Idol to be voted off.

"I want to make an album, I want to star in a film, I want to do Broadway, I want to open up an organic restaurant ... it just depends on what comes first," she continued.

The 21-year-old aspiring singer from Sarasota, FL also has marriage in her future, but wedding plans are on hold until she gets her career on track. Mercado says she's the type of person who lives in the now, and at the moment there's no big rush to say "I do."

"(My fiancé) is so supportive and we both have a mutual understanding about everything, so when the time is right we'll do it, but right now we're focused on the careers," says Mercado.

The former Top 3 finalist describes herself as a mix of many things. In terms of the album she plans on putting together, Mercado is interested in pop, R&B and even old school musicals. But that's not all.

"I'm just like a black Christina Aguilera (and) Alicia Keys. I can definitely see myself putting together a Christina Aguilera album like the one she just recently did and an Alicia Keys album," she says. "I'm growing as an artist, I'm evolving ... you'll know who I am once I put out that album."

Social Climber

It girls on the scene have a new secret weapon for staying in shape.

By Vanessa Craft
Contributing Writer

What's a busy young socialite to do when the summer party season is just around the corner and her diet of canapés and cocktails has left her a little squidgy around the edges? Those in the know call on health and fitness trainer Alex Reznik, who created The Socialite Workout specifically for high-profile party girls who can't afford to be camera shy.

"A lot of clients were showing up for sessions after a night of partying," says Reznik on his inspiration for the program. "They were clearly in no state to work out properly, but I still had to find a way to keep them in shape." The solution? Toning exercises that can largely be done on the floor.

It takes a careful balance of drill sergeant and gentle guide to successfully manage a savvy socialite's excuses for not working out, but part of Reznik's charm is that he takes it all in stride. "One time, I went to a client's house to train her privately," he remembers. "She opened the door, dressed to the nines, and said she wanted to treat me to breakfast so we could have a get-to-know-you chat. I told her we could get acquainted just as easily while she was on the treadmill."

SCREEN TEST

Not sure if you have sensitive skin? La Roche-Posay's diagnostic tool can tell.

A new device called the SensiTest, developed by La Roche-Posay and available at select Canadian drugstores, can help you determine your skin type and sensitivity — and how you should treat it. The free two-minute test — which involves answering a series of questions on a computer screen — took nearly 10 years to develop. Once you've determined your skin type, the SensiTest recommends a skin-care regimen adapted to your needs.

SUMMER SKETCHBOOK

In a season of bold textiles, Virginia Johnson's summer collection stands out with its simplicity: Sailboats and dandelions in fuchsia, teal and yellow decorate cotton-voile caftans and sundresses. "Prairie" evokes a dust storm, while "Chevrons" is a tribal motif recalling the African mudcloths that Johnson loves to collect (www.virginiajohnson.com).

Autobiography of a Wardrobe (Pantheon) by Elizabeth Kendall

BOOKS: CLOSET CASES

Imagine if the chartreuse silk blouse or velvet harem pants that glint reproachfully from the back of your closet had feelings or (gasp) memories of what transpired the last time you deigned to wear them. That is the premise behind Autobiography of a Wardrobe (Pantheon) by Elizabeth Kendall. The author, whose previous books include The Runaway Bride, has used this unusual device to write an anecdotal history of fashion trends and disasters, from her vile summer-camp shorts to bold Marimekko prints to a ruched lime-green camisole. If nothing else, it will make you clean out your closet. SANDRA MARTIN

Floral scents bloom

Perfume counters are resembling our gardens

GARDENIAS AND woody florals are among the favourite notes of perfumers these days, as are scents that add a bit of masculinity to an otherwise classic female fragrance.

The purposeful clashing of manly and womanly smells probably can be traced to Thierry Mugler's Angel, says Luca Turin, a scholar in olfactory science.

"It was a 5 o'clock shadow and chest hair on a floral with a touch of vanilla," Turin says.

Turin and Tania Sanchez, a perfume collector and reviewer, reviewed more than 1,500 perfumes and colognes for their Perfumes: The Guide (Viking, 2008).

"Florals never really go away. We've seen a number of gardenias — which is rather unusual — but at least they smell like gardenias this time," Sanchez says.

Here's a sampling of what's new this season:

WOMEN

» Very Irresistible Givenchy Summer Cocktail. This scent, with notes of star anise and crushed mint leaf, is intended for sun-drenched skin.

» Ralph Lauren Romance Eau Fraiche. Eau Fraiche is a limited edition intended for summertime getaways. It's a tweak to the original Romance with notes of lotus flower, guava and waterlily.

» Hermes' Un Jardin Apres la Mousson. This floral-spicy concoction is intended as a unisex fragrance. It favours green notes as well as watery ones and cool spices like coriander.

» Bond No. 9's Andy Warhol Union Square. Bond bottles different neighbourhoods of New York City, but this one isn't interpreted through the modern nose. Instead, the inspiration is Warhol's brightly coloured flower screenprints made at his Union Square studio with green floral notes.

» YSL Paris Springtime Pont des Amours. This season's limited edition scent mimics the vibe at a Parisian bridge known at the "Bridge of Love"' in the early morning hours. The notes include rosebuds, full-bloomed rose and lily of the valley.

MEN:

» Dolce & Gabbana: The One for Men. Matthew McConaughey is the face for this fragrance that the designers classify as a spicy oriental, heavy on the tobacco and hints of spices such as coriander, basil and ginger.

» L'Homme Design by Yves Saint Laurent. This citron zest-and-ginger scent aims to capture the contrast between luxury and industry. It's bottled in a clear-glass, test tube-style phallic flacon designed by architect Jean Nouvel.

» Eternity for Men Summer. Green, fruity and fresh with its heart rooted in juniper berry. A women's Eternity Summer also emphasizes freshness with notes of wet bamboo leaf, basil, midnight-blooming jasmine and ginger root.

» Boss Pure. This is intended for the man who wants to "become one with water," according to the perfumer. Fig water, fizzy citrus and subtle floral notes of lily and hyacinth drive the broad aquatic accord.

Trevor Wilkinson opened his restaurant two years ago in a neighbourhood filled with upscale dining.

Profile ONCE A DUSTY refuge for wine bars and venerable French restaurants, the block where Trevor Wilkinson opened his basement restaurant and lounge has become a pinnacle in the city's dining landscape in the nearly two years since he took over the space. Next door is Lucien, Colborne Lane is around the corner, and Jamie Kennedy's Wine Bar is just around the corner on Church. Wilkinson didn't have nearly as much competition so close when he was chef at Lobby on Bloor by the ROM, but he says he's enjoying it now.

"I live in the neighbourhood and have lived there for 12 years now," he tells me. "I like the east side — I've shopped at the St. Lawrence market for as long as I remember. I didn't foresee that all of a sudden all these other great chefs would move into the neighbourhood. We don't compete at all — we're all different. And it just makes us more of a dining destination. We have some great chefs – Jamie Kennedy, Claudio Aprile, Scott Woods. You're not going to get everybody every night anyway — sometimes they'll be at Claudio's place, sometimes they'll be at mine. We just got lucky, I think."

Wilkinson is grateful for the profile that his years at Lobby gave him, but says he was happy to move on, even if it was into the risky position of chef/owner, when Lobby became more of a nightspot than an eatery: "When you're having a meal you don't want a bunch of 21-year-olds dropping their limes and their straws on your table."

"My place is a restaurant. I try to have an unpretentious atmosphere — an anti-elitist fine dining establishment. We're lucky we have a fine dining menu and we play the music a little softer, and a lounge where we play the music a little louder. We're not a club, but we try to be an upscale, tailored to today's thirty-something."

Wilkinson's menu, except for two items he brought over from Lobby, is all new. His rich mac and cheese is comfort food for the recently collegiate, and while almost everyone seems to be doing deluxe little plates of sliders nowadays, Wilkinson was something of a trailblazer with his trio of mini Kobe beef burgers. They're on the lounge menu at Trevor today, but the action is really on his concise but impressive dinner menu.

He's proud of the lobster and shrimp pasta dish that's been there since they opened — "one simple pasta is something you should have on a menu," he says — but the meat is where it's at. Braised beef cheeks show up in the nachos at the bar, and Wilkinson says that his steaks are as good as anything at the city's best steakhouses. Pork is a specialty of Jesse Vallins, his chef de cuisine, and in a city whose culinary present is decidedly pig-shaped, he still manages to do something impressive with a special that brings together a butter-soft tenderloin and a pork sausage with a plate of spring veggies — hard, bright green peas are showing up on menus all over right now, a harbinger of spring produce – and a wild leek mustard. It's simple and flavourful, would probably pair well with quite a bit of Trevor's well-chosen wine list, and an indication that you should go with the port when you sit down in Wilkinson's cozy subterranean space.

Dick hits the casual spot

The Spotted Dick

81 Bloor St. E.
416-929-3425

THE PULSE
CHRIS ATCHISON
chris.atchison@metronews.ca

Ambience: It must first be clarified, for those who don't know the meaning of the term "spotted dick," that the name of this pub refers to an old-fashioned English pudding made with dried fruit and custard. Perhaps a different moniker would have been more marketable, but The Spotted Dick's loyal clientele doesn't seem to mind. This is very much a traditional pub in its design, geared toward the sports-beer-wings set, and draws the type of pub aficionado that prefers familiar faces and settings over trendy must-see bars.

Crowd: The Bloor Street location brings in a mixed clientele ranging from their mid-20s to mid-50s. The younger ones tend to fill the tables and socialize, while the older regulars usually hold up the bar to chat, watch sports or play trivia games.

Dress code: Try to wear undergarments. The rest is negotiable.

Will I get lucky? There is a chance, it just depends on the night and the dynamic of the group with whom you're spending the evening. The more they mingle, the better shot you have. It's a fun crowd, so do your best to win them over (but not all of them — that would be wrong!).

Should I dance on the bar? It's a pub, not a nightclub. Keep your feet on the floor.

Best reason to pay a visit: It's a much cheaper option than most venues in or around Yorkville.

Cocktail du jour: If you need to ask ... OK, for those of you who are unsure of pub etiquette, always opt for draught beer. They have a decent range of domestics, premiums and imports on tap — Old Speckled Hen, a traditional English cask ale, is really worth investigating — while others might opt for a pint of cider or a whisky rocks. Choosier folks might explore The Spotted Dick's wine list. It is there, but it's not particularly detailed. Beer is still your best bet.

Hours: 11 a.m.-12 a.m. (Sunday through Wednesday) or until 1 a.m. (Thursday and Friday).

Hot games for 2008

Drum-focused game leads pack during preview

By JONATHAN P. KUEHLEIN
Metro Toronto

ARE YOU READY for a new revolution?

How about four? Or maybe five?

Konami Digital Entertainment, the company behind some of the most popular franchises in the red-hot gaming industry, offered up a sneak preview of some of their hottest new games for 2008 at an event in San Francisco this week and Metro got your Canadian-exclusive scoop.

Leading the way from Konami this year is the all-new game, Rock Revolution, a drum-focused social game in the same vein as bestsellers Guitar Hero and Rock Band.

"Konami has been a pioneer in music games for a long time," said associate producer Keith Matejka, pointing to titles like Dance Dance Revolution (DDR) and Karaoke Revolution.

"This, for us, was the logical next step."

"Rock Revolution, at its core, is the ultimate drum experience. We've got this fantastic peripheral that has six pads and a pedal that was designed to simulate playing rock drums."

Konami is also celebrating the 10th anniversary of DDR with three different new games — one each for Xbox 360, Wii and PlayStation 2 — and the strong hint of a new arcade version.

"People can expect something new for the 10th anniversary," said producer Hiro Chiwata.

"I can't say what, but I'm sure you can guess."

Also revealed this week was Castlevania: Order Of Ecclesia for Nintendo DS, the latest in a hugely popular franchise that is now in its 22nd year, and media got a first look at highly anticipated new titles like Silent Hill: Homecoming, Hellboy: Science Of Evil and Metal Gear Solid 4: Guns Of The Patriots, which is expected to be the biggest game of the year for the PlayStation 3 when it hits store shelves on June 12.

Keep your eye on Metro for more on these games soon.

The digits 1 through 9 will appear exactly once in each row, each column, and each zone. (A zone is an outlined 3x3 grid within the larger puzzle grid. There are nine of these zones in the puzzle.) Do not enter a digit into a box if it already appears elsewhere in the same 3x3 zone, or in the same row across the puzzle, or column down the puzzle.

Shania single again

Shania Twain and her husband, producer Robert "Mutt" Lange, have split, People.com reports.

"Shania Twain and her husband, music producer Robert 'Mutt' Lange, are separating after 14 years of marriage," spokesman Jason Owen says in a statement. "This is a private matter and there will be no further comment at this time."

Twain, 42, and Lange, 59, married in 1993, just six months after meeting. They are parents to a six-year-old son, Eja D'Angelo.

In 2002, Twain opened up about her and Lange's relationship, saying: "Our love has always been based on friendship and compatibility," though, she added, "we are very different."

In early 2000, press reports surfaced that their then seven-year marriage was in trouble, but the couple remained together. Around the same time, Twain all but disappeared from public life, retreating to Tour-de-Peilz, Switzerland. "I needed a break, physically and mentally," she explained of her move. "I needed to leave behind the whole 'Shania' thing and be myself."

In the December 2007 issue of Redbook, Twain said: "I struggled a lot internally with my fame, and coping with it has been very difficult."

As for getting back into the public eye with a new perfume and album to be released this year, she says, "I'm not naturally a spotlight person ... [But] I don't mind being the centre of attention in a controlled, comfortable environment." Metro News Services

Foster alone

JODIE FOSTER has split with her long-term partner Cydney Bernard, imdb.com reports. The news comes just five months after the actress paid tribute to her alleged partner of 14 years at an award ceremony. The 45-year-old, who had never before acknowledged Bernard in public, gushed about her during an acceptance speech in December, saying: "My beautiful Cydney, who sticks with me through the rotten and the bliss." The couple has two adopted children together. Foster's publicist was unavailable for comment.

Owen, Kate split

KATE HUDSON and Owen Wilson have called it quits, less than two months after rekindling their romance in Miami, People.com reports.

The end of their erratic courtship (they began dating in September '06) comes amid erroneous reports that the pair were engaged, fuelled by photos of Hudson wearing a Tiffany & Co. ring both on-and-off the set of Bride Wars, which she's filming in Boston.

"It was a pretty bad breakup," says a Wilson pal. "Owen said it was a tough one. He definitely doesn't want to dwell on it. He wants to put it behind him."

Rumer to sing

RUMER WILLIS is set to release a record, femalefirst.co.uk reports. The 19-year-old aspiring star – the daughter of Bruce Willis and Demi Moore – has reportedly caught the interest of music executives with her "deep, husky voice."

Willis recently insisted she landed a role in upcoming film Wild Cherry without any help from her A-list parents. She said: "I think when people meet me they're shocked, because the idea of celebrity children is that they're trust-fund babies that don't have any desire to work."

Dunst dumped

MIU MIU model Kirsten Dunst has been replaced by Johnny Depp's partner Vanessa Paradis, femalefirst.co.uk reports. The French singer will be photographed by Mert Alas and Marcus Pioggott for the autumn advertising campaign.

Miu Miu are yet to officially comment on the switch, but it has been claimed Dunst's departure may be linked to her recent stint in Utah's Cirque Lodge rehab clinic.

Since leaving the clinic, Dunst has been seen with her rumoured new boyfriend Ryan Gosling.

Halliwell engaged

GERI HALLIWELL is getting married, femalefirst.co.uk reports. The former Spice Girls star – who has a two-year-old daughter Bluebell – is planning a September wedding with her backing dancer partner Ivan "Flipz" Velez.

A source told Britain's Daily Star newspaper: "Geri has a huge diamond and an even bigger grin on her face now that she and Ivan are marrying.

"It's been a whirlwind affair but when you know, you know, and she doesn't care if she's criticized for being hasty."

Model relationship

Caridee English has a new lover, Page-Six.com reports. The America's Next Top Model winner dumped her hometown boyfriend and has taken up with fellow model Tyson Beckford. English said on Tuesday that her ex-boyfriend – whom she brought to New York City from Fargo, N.D. – owes her $10,000 US. "He went into my bank account, took all that money and went to Las Vegas and spent it," she said. "We're over."

Heche broke?

Anne Heche says she can no longer afford to pay the nearly $15,000 US-a-month in child and spousal support because she's unemployed after the cancellation of Men In Trees, People.com reports.

"I am continuing to look for work, but I have no offers pending and the impending strike by the Screen Actors Guild reduces my prospects for work even further," Heche, 38, writes in court papers.

A judge Wednesday gave her a temporary break, saying she didn't have to pay her next support payment to her ex Coley Laffoon, 34, covering the month of July. But Superior Court Judge Gail Ruderman Feuer ordered the actress to provide updated income and expense information.

In a court declaration, Heche indicated her financial straits were dire and that she can no longer afford to pay the $14,798 in monthly support, along with private school tuition for her six-year-old son Homer, the mortgage on her house in Canada where Men In Trees filmed, rent on her Los Angeles home and car expenses.

"Since January 18, 2008, I have been unemployed and had no income from employment except for one very short-term contract for a movie role for which I received a total of $65,000, approximately the amount I received for one episode of Men In Trees," she writes.

She adds: "I do receive some residuals from previous acting work. However, the amounts are nominal."
